INDUSTRIAL BILL SENT TO ROOSEVELT

ENGLISH DEBT OFFER IS SENT TO PRESIDENT

SETTLEMENT WOULD AID ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

BULLETIN

Washington, June 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt will reply tomorrow to the British offer of partial payments on war debts with a message that is expected to spring a surprise among the company of nations.

There was basis for a conviction in Washington tonight that the injection of war debts into the economic parley had brought about a situation that called for an American answer.

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 13 (AP)—Great Britain has sent to Washington a proposal for settlement of the June 15 debt installment which it believes acceptable to President Roosevelt, Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, told the house of commons tonight, arousing hope that the issue which has acutely disturbed the world economic conference would soon be amicably adjusted.

Declaring that a full statement would be submitted late tomorrow night after the expected favorable reply from President Roosevelt, Mr. Chamberlain said he was not in a position to disclose at present the terms of the proposals.

Payment of 10%

In well informed quarters however it was asserted that the proposed basis of settlement was by payment of ten per cent, with the understanding insisted upon by President Roosevelt that this rate would not constitute a precedent for a final settlement of the whole problem.

A British note offering a partial payment on the $75,950,000 war debt instalment due Thursday was submitted to the state department at Washington today. An informal proposal somewhat to the same effect on the part of Italy was also presented).

"There has been a lengthy exchange of views between the British government and the United States government," Mr. Chamberlain told an acutely interested house, "and as a result the British ambassador at Washington today handed the state department a note setting forth the British proposals concerning the June instalment.

"We expect to receive the president's reply tomorrow.

"We have no reason to suppose that it will be other than satisfactory to us but as it has not yet reached us I am not in a position to state its terms."

Patching up of the Anglo-American debt issue was regarded in American delegation quarters tonight as of extreme importance for the success of the conference and American contribution to it.

Hull Not Present

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, to excited astonishment and anxiety by failing to appear at the plenary sessoin today where he was scheduled to be the first speaker, expected tonight to make his opening declaration of American policy to the conference tomorrow. It is believed that his central subject will be tariff reduction.

The apparent formation of European blocs designed to force the United States to settle the war debts problem immediately and to stabilize the dollar price

MATTERN BACK AT KHABAROVSK

Starts for Nome, Returns When Weather Conditions Are Bad

BY STANLEY P. RICHARDSON
(Associated Press Staff Correspondent)

Moscow, June 13. (AP)—Jimmie Mattern backtracked on his globe-girdling flight and unexpectedly landed at Khabarovsk today eight hours and five minutes after he had left that Siberian town for Nome, Alaska.

The Texan returned to Khabarovsk at 6:20 a. m. Moscow time (10:20 p. m. Monday Eastern Standard Time). No reason was given as to why he suddenly reversed his direction, but it was generally supposed he had bucked into stiff headwinds and heavy weather and found it impossible to make Nome safely.

He had left Khabarovsk at 10:15 p. m. (2:15 p. m. Eastern Standard Time) Monday. Weather reports at the time warned of heavy weather ahead, particularly in the region of Katmchaika peninsula, northeast of his starting point.

The Khabarovsk to Nome leg of Mattern's projected around the world solo flight is 2,500 miles long, largely over water.

Rackham, Wealthy Detroiter, Passes

Detroit, June 13. (AP)—Horace H. Rackham, 73, Detroit, multi-millionaire who invested $5,000 in the Ford Motor Co. 30 years ago, died tonight following a long illness.

Rackham was an attorney, and a neighbor of the Fords in 1903. Henry Ford called upon Rackham and his partner to draw up corporation papers for the Ford Motor Co. against the advice of friends Rackham and his partner John W. Anderson each invested $5,000 in the company. In 1919 Rackham sold his Ford stock for $12,500,000. The original 50 shares he purchased had been increased to 1,000 by stock dividends.

Senator Couzens Arrives In England

Plymouth, England, June 13 (AP)—Senator James Couzens of Michigan, arriving in England tonight on his way to join the American delegation at the world economic conference, said if a workable plan for recovery is not reached at the London parley he will return to the United States a strong advocate for a policy of isolation.

"If the conference falls, civilization will be so disappointed and grieved that we may as well paddle our own canoes," said the senator.

He is one of the six official United States delegates.

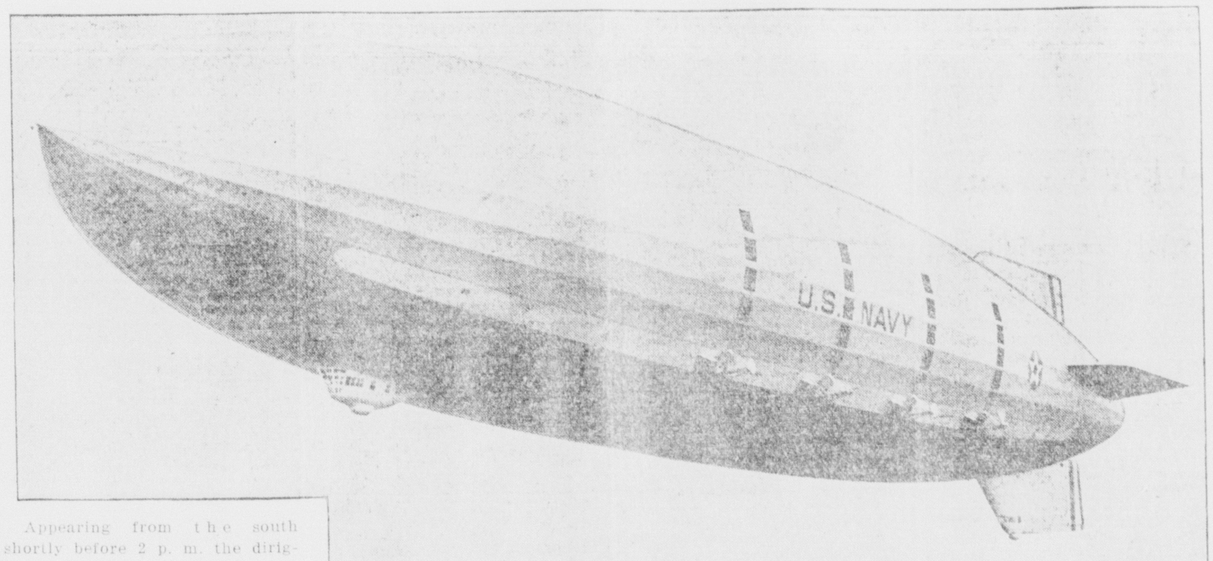
ESCANABA SEES AIRSHIP MACON



Appearing from the south shortly before 2 p. m. the dirigible Macon gave Escanaba residents a good long-distance view of herself Tuesday afternoon until about 4:30. The big ship disappeared to general view to the eastward for a time, but reappeared, again heading for the south, and was seen plainly by groups on the lake shore and on vantage points of buildings. Local aviators who circled out on the lake while the Macon was in view estimated that the dirigible was about 15 miles out from Escanaba, and was flying considerably lower than the airplanes, probably about 3,000 feet.

Lieut. Walter Arntzen left the Escanaba airport in his plane as soon as the Macon was sighted, and met the dirigible beyond the Garden peninsula, between the mainland and Beaver Island. He flew within 600 feet of the Macon, which is as close as regulations allow, and said that her motors appeared to be functioning perfectly, with no sign of trouble aboard. The flying was bumpy for the planes, while the Macon appeared to sail along like an ocean liner. Dr. C. J. B. Kitchen of Escanaba and Ellsworth Ranguette of Nahma were also out in the lake to greet the first dirigible to visit the Upper Peninsula.

Jury Finds Police Officer Not Guilty

Detroit, June 13 (AP)—A jury which deliberated less than 20 minutes today acquitted Orville Holmes, suspended Detroit patrolman, of charges of slaying his wife Florence on the night of May 12. The jury consisted of six men and six women.

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Administration forces, decisively routed in their first test on veterans' relief, tonight recessed the senate to rally their strength for tomorrow's impending and more bitter clash over liberalizing benefits to former soldiers, cut sharply by the economy law.

The test, which involved a comparatively minor point at issue brought a 48 to 31 vote which sent back to conference with the house

State May Release Its Calamity Bonds

Lansing, June 13. (AP)—The possibility appeared today that calamity bonds which have been posted with the state to secure R. F. C. funds may be cancelled or released, and that the state demand that municipalities begin setting up sinking funds July 1 of this year to meet federal advances may be abrogated.

Burney J. Brower, Jackson attorney, told the state administration board that unless $66,700 of calamity bonds posted by that city are released, the city will have to default. He declared many municipalities will be unable to begin sinking funds this year. The state does not have to start repaying the R. F. C. until 1935, Governor Comstock said he does not believe that municipalities should be forced to meet sinking fund requirements now. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

ROAD PROJECTS ARE DEFERRED

Democrats Want to Wait Until Van Wagoner Takes Office

Lansing, June 13. (AP)—The first break on the bi-partisan state administrative board occurred today when the Democratic majority insisted upon deferring further action on state highway projects until the new Democratic highway commissioner assumes office July 1.

More than $3,000,000 of projects submitted to the board for approval by Grover C. Dillman, highway commissioner, were tabled. The board also refused to accept a $5,900,000 maintenance budget.

The motions to defer action were made by John K. Stack, Jr., auditor general, who said he had been requested to do so by Murray D. Van Wagoner, highway commisioner-elect. Stack contended Van Wagoner might be able to introduce some economies.

Dillman Indignant

Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, and Webster H. Pearce, superintendent of public instruction, voted with Dillman for approval of the projects. They were outnumbered by the three Democratic members of the board and Governor Comstock's deciding vote.

The meeting developed charges from Dillman that Van Wagoner, who has been in Lansing for some

Huge Dirigible Scoots Back to Chicago Fair After Peninsula Tour

Chicago, June 13 (AP)—The new silvered mistress of the air, the giant dirigible Macon, appeared in Chicago tonight at 6:35 p. m. (CDT) and dipped its nose in salute to thousands of visitors at the Century of Progress.

Flying low, its hull gleaming in the late sunlight the Macon cruised over the bright buildings of the exposition. Twin towers of the "sky ride," highest structure in Chicago extending 628 feet in the air, were vantage points for many fair visitors as the craft arrived there with its convoy of two small blimps and two airplanes. The other craft met the big ship at Evanston.

No Hint Of Trouble

There was no hint of navigation difficulties as the dirigible passed over loop and exposition. Borne on a tail wind, her motors were roaring in unison.

Earlier today as the Macon flew north on its 48 hour test flight, wireless reports told of a damaged rudder. A brief flurry of excitement accompanied the report given a ground wireless station at Frankfort, Mich. The communication, however, said the rudder trouble was "nothing to worry about."

Observers at the sky ride studying the Macon through telescopes said they could see no evidence of any damage to the rudders. All were apparently working smoothly.

The Macon skimmed south to the edge of the city and over the grounds of the Columbian Exposition of 40 years ago before heading back over the loop to give the city another view.

The Macon left its base at Akron, O., last night on its cruise with 90 persons aboard. The dirigible spent the early hours of last night in the vicinity of Lake Erie. Heading westward, it appeared over Lake Michigan at Chicago at dawn. It then nosed northward to salute Milwaukee and hugging the shore of Lake Michigan, sailed on to Escanaba in the upper Michigan peninsula. Newberry sighted it shortly afterward. The ship turned at Manistique and started its speedy return to Chicago.

At 3:30 p. m., the huge ship moved over Charlevoix, Mich., retracing its course south after veering over the Lake near Frankfort, Mich.

The south trip was fast. At 4:55 (CST) the massive ship again appeared over Milwaukee, reaching here less than an hour later.

The Macon pointed its nose southeast over Lake Michigan and headed for its home port about 8 o'clock (CDT).

GLASS BANKING BILL APPROVED

Unified System Planned in Reform Bill Sent to White House

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Without a dissenting voice, the Glass-Steagall banking bill—the center of so much dispute in the senate in another session—went through that branch to final enactment today and was dispatched to the White House.

The measure, called by some the most important banking legislation since the enactment of the federal reserve act, came to the senate from the house that a little earlier in the day had given approval to the final draft of conferees by a vote of 191 to 6.

Only a few minutes after passing the measure, the senate today added $150,000,000 to the $3,500,000,000 deficiency reconstruction appropriation bill in order to take care of the government's subscription to stock in the bank deposit insurance fund.

Was Abandoned Once

The legislaiton, which carries a plan for insurance of bank deposits, was called by Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), "a landmark on the road to permanent stabilization of the banking structure."

Designed originally to curb the use of federal reserve credit for speculative purposes, the bill has been enlarged to provide insurance for deposits and other features that its friends believe will bring a unified banking system.

The controversial measure was virtually lifted from its deathbed to become one of the major legislative accomplishments of the rec-

77-Year-Old Man Accused Of Murder

Port Huron, June 13. (AP)—A charge of slaying Henry Kusstrow, 62, has been placed against 77-year-old Boney Hunter, after police said the two quarrelled in Kussrow's shack near here Monday. Kussrow's body, a bullet wound from a rifle in the head was found later.

Schroeder Bill Is Signed By Governor

Lansing, June 13 (AP)—The Schroeder bill permitting a two-year moratorium on land contract foreclosures, was signed by Governor Comstock today. The measure is a companion act to one permitting a moratorium until 1935 on mortgage foreclosures.

Under the new act, which is immediately effective, a person may petition the court for a continuance of land contract foreclosure proceedings until March 1, 1935. The power with the court is discretionary. If the continuance is granted the court is required to make arrangements for collection of rentals, taxes and insurance. A clause in the act extends the time required for giving notice before eviction from 30 to 90 days.

Balfe's Attorney To Request Sanity Hearing For Client

Flint, Mich., June 13. (AP)—Indications that a sanity hearing will be asked for 17-year-old Balfe Macdonald, returned here yesterday after his arrest in Nashville, Tenn., and subsequent confession that he killed his wealthy mother, Mrs. Grace B. Macdonald, were seen tonight in statements of his attorney.

The attorney, Clifford A. Bishop, entered a plea of not guilty for the youth yesterday when he was arraigned in justice court, and Prosecutor Andrew J. Transue said he recognized the possibility that by Friday, the date for examination, a move would be made by Bishop for appointment of a sanity commission.

Returning from Nashville with the Macdonald boy, Bishop said that if the police produced evidence that the boy killed his mother he would aske that an impartial commission of "the best alienists in the country" give Balfe a thorough examination.

INTEREST RATE FIXED AT 1¾%

Small Loan Bill Sent to Governor, Caused Hot Controversy

Lansing, June 13 (AP)—Another controversial issue left the legislature today as the membership sent to the governor's desk the bill reducing the interest rates on small loans from 3½ to 1¾ percent a month.

The senate adopted a conference report on the bill which previously had been accepted by the house. The vote was 27 to 3 with Senators Charles B. Asselin, Bay City, and Lee A. Gorman, Detroit, both Democrats, and Felix H. H. Flynn, Republican, Cadillac, casting the only dissenting votes.

The bill has created one of the most extensive quarrels in years. Charges have been leveled against the small loan lobby before the house investigating committee and on the floor of each chamber.

ACT DESIGNED TO INCREASE PRICES, WORK

SENATE PASSAGE IS GIVEN BY SEVEN VOTE MARGIN

BULLETIN

Washington, June 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt tonight summoned an extraordinary meeting of cabinet officials who will direct the vast potentialties of the newly enacted industrial revival-public works bill, discussing with them even before the big bill was signed details of how to put a million or more men to work as speedily as possible.

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June (AP)—Beating down a triple-threat opposition, senate administration forces today put the final stamp of congressional approval upon the industrial revival bill and sent that king pin of President's Roosevelt's plan on its way to the White House.

The vote was comparatively close, 46 to 39, but it was enough to overcome a combination of independent Republicans and regulars from both parties. The senate passed the bill originally by 57 to 24.

Taking the floor just before the seven-vote victory margin was announced by Vice President Garner, Chairman Harrison of the finance committee and head of the senate conferees, defended the bill against an all-day onslaught. He asserted the conferees "tried to carry out in good faith the wishes of the senate."

Many Swing Away

LaFollette (R-Wis); Borah (R-Ida); Norris (R-Neb), and Clark (D-Mo) had led the opposition with assertions the senate conferees were prejudiced and made no real effort to retain amendments for full publicity of income tax returns, prohibitions against price-fixing and combinations in restraint of trade, and removal of tax exemptions from governmental securities.

On the final vote administration leaders lost all the Republican Progressives and many Democrats who voted last Friday for the bill. In all, 23 Republicans, 15 Democrats and Shipstead (FL-Minn) voted against adoption of the airport.

However, five Republican regulars and near regulars—Barbour, Capper, Davis, McNary and Steiwer—decided the issue favorably by joining 41 Democrats for its adoption. The roll call follows:

ENGLISH DEBT OFFER IS SENT TO PRESIDENT

before other questions were taken up by the conference caused some concern among the American delegates.

France was seen as the leader of the group which desires to induce the United States to hasten currency stabilization, while Great Britain appeared to be principally interested in bringing about an adjustment of the debt matter.

Allusions to "going home" as a result of the unexpected nature of the opening speeches were heard around American headquarters and members of some other national groups feared that the absence of Secretary Hull and most of his colleagues from the morning and afternoon discussions might have an unhappy significance.

It was made clear by American authorities however that there was no question of quitting the conference and that their empty chairs in the assembly hall were not intended as a warning gesture.

Secretary Hull, attempting today at a meeting of the bureau of the economic conference, to obtain the post of chairman of the monetary commission for a member of his delegation, James M. Cox, was blocked by opposition from Premier Daladier of France and supporting groups.

M. Daladier demanded that this post go to the representative of a country which still maintains the gold standard presumably France itself—and joined in urging the American secretary of state to accept the chairmanship of the economic commission, the other major body which will determine the course of the parley. Mr. Hull declined the economic chairmanship for his delegation.

Among the American delegates some suggestions that their presentation might quit the conference were heard today when the demand for immediate settlement of war debts was renewed in the plenary session by spokesmen for Italy and South Africa.

These suggestions were couched in jocular form but made an impression upon many persons who recalled the old adage that "many a truth is spoken in jest."

American feelings were ruffled also by renewed insistence from French quarters, echoed by Italain and Polish speakers, that the dollar and the pound must be stabilized before the conference can proceed to deal with any other question on the agenda.

The German demand for early solution of credit and financial problems, now keenly distressing the government of the Reich, was brought before the world gathering by Baron Von Neurath who declared that "ultimately international debts can be paid only in goods and services.

When delegates noted that neither Secretary Hull, who was scheduled as first speaker, nor any member of the American group was present as the plenary session began this morning, Chairman MacDonald, after a brief delay to make sure that Mr. Hull was absent, called on Premier Daladier.

The Frenchman boldly announced his government's desire for "monetary security" for commercial exchange.

"The maintenance or reestablishment of liberty of gold movements appears indispensible to us," M. Daladier said. "How are you going to reestablish the circulation of goods and conclude economic accords if the measure of values remains dependent on caprice or hazard?

"What would you say of the engineer or architect who used an elastic yardstick."

After currency stabilization, France desires also to see the conclusion of economic accords and the launching of big international public works schemes to alleviate unemployment and stimulate the flow of capital, her premier said.

Invoking the conference to seek harmonized order and avoid economic war, M. Daladier closed with a stern warning of the consequences of failure.

"Dragged together toward the abyss," he said, "the peoples of the world will find relief only in common action to restore universal confidence by free and loyal collaboration."

When the French delegates finished speaking no member of the American delegation had yet entered the hall. It was explained that there was a delay in the preparation of Mr. Hull's speech, detaining him and his colleagues.

Two American delegates, Sam D. McReynolds and James M. Cox, came in time to hear the next speaker, Guido Jung, Italian finance minister.

Artificial Means Keeps Man Alive After Heart Stops

Milwaukee, June 13 (AP)—The strange story of a man literally "raised from the dead" and kept alive 48 hours after his heart had failed so he might tell his son a confidential matter of great importance was revealed today at the American Medical Association meeting.

His heart kept beating artificially for two days by a machine known as the "artificial pacemaker" developed last year for re-starting heart beats stopped by shock or other means.

The man knew he was dying and urged his doctors to keep him alive until arrival of his son, who had been summoned from San Francisco, and was hurrying to New York. A few minutes afterward his heart apparently stopped beating, said Dr. E. Fritze, of Beth David hospital, New York, who told the story. The pacemaker, which works by a needle inserted into the right auricle of the heart through the chest, was brought into play and he was "brought back to life."

The pacemaker was kept in operation until the son arrived, and the sick man was enabled to give him the information he desired. Then the heart no longer could be kept operating.

The pacemaker stimulates the nerves which cause heart muscles to expand and contract, by means of tiny electric currents.

Massachusetts On Repeal Bandwagon

Boston, June 13 (AP)—Massachusetts today joined the column of states committed to repeal of the 18th amendment.

Delegates pledged to repeal won a smashing victory in the contest for seats in a constitutional convention to act on ratification of an amendment to repeal prohibition. It was the 11th state to ratify in effect by election of wet delegates.

In each of the 15 congressional districts, from which three delegates were chosen, the wets rolled up huge majorities. Great gains, as compared with elections in years past when prohibition was involved, were made by the wets in all sections of the state, especially in the rural districts.

All but a few towns voted on the question of local license and in scores of small towns where in 1924 license was voted down, the vote today was in favor of it.

The combined popular vote for repeal today, with 1313 of the 1707 precincts reported was 341,535 to 83,796. In Boston, 120 precincts out of 362 gave 26,977 repeal votes to 2,012 for the prohibition candidates.

federal control to halt over-production, sweatshop wages and unduly long hours.

It seeks thereby to increase prices and recreate employment for millions of jobless.

Plan Public Works

As a supplement to this broad program, which would be encouraged through a two-year suspension of anti-trust laws wherever they interfere with the objectives of the bill, a $3,300,000,000 public works project is provided to be financed by a federal bond issue with interest and sinking fund requirements taken care of by new corporation taxes and a boost in the gasoline levy.

Immediately upon learning of passage, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States issued a statement appealing to industry to take immediate advantage of its provisions.

"Today's passage of the national industry recovery act," said the statement, signed by Henry I. Harriman, president, "constitutes a most important step in our progress towards business rehabilitation. It should begin immediately to bring about a large measure of re-employment and an increase in buying power throughout the country.

"The act will permit legitimate business enterprise to lift itself above the destructive competition which has prevented recovery and which has been threatening to bring about complete economic demoralization.

"With reasonable opportunity to work together, business enterprises might earlier have mitigated the effects of the depression. Continued denial of that opportunity, with a consequently great amount of business wreckage, would inevitably have renewed an era of mergers and combinations that followed earlier depressions and would have given rise to problems which the country, in the public interest, should be spared."

Harriman said, however, there were provisions in the act "which I should have been very glad to have seen eliminated or changed."

"The Chamber of Commerce of the United States," he said, "has consistently stood for the real open shop and I appeared before the ways and means committee of the house of representatives to urge that that principle be contained in the bill.

Leebove Will Be Summoned Before House Committee

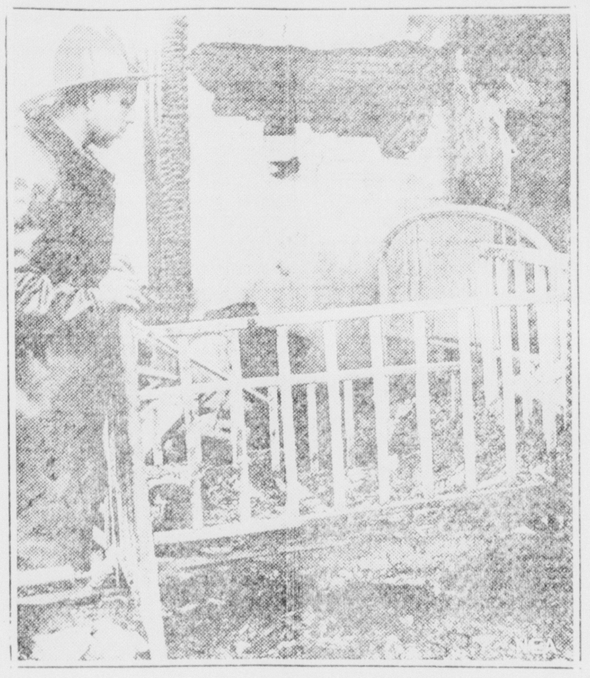
Lansing, June 13 (AP)—The legislative lobbying inquiry flared up again today, when the house committee decided to summon Isaiah Leebove, New York attorney, and friend of Governor Comstock, to tell whether he "has taken command of the government."

Rep. Lawrence O'Neill, Democrat, Paris, chairman of the committee, stated Leebove has been asked to appear Wednesday. A subpoena also has been issued and if he does not enter an appearance it will be served, O'Neill said.

The committee decided to question W. Alfred Debo, parole commissioner and chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and Senator Edward B. McKenna, Democrat, Detroit, who claims to have been offered a bribe by a lobbyist. McKenna asserted he was informed he would "be fixed for life" if he voted "right" on a bill cutting small loan interest rates. He declared he would furnish direct evidence to the committee.

First successfully introduced into this country in 1890 at New York City, the European starling is now found in every state east of the Mississippi.

Tragic Symbol of Celluloid Blast



This charred crib is mute symbol of the tragedy which cost the lives of nine persons, injured seventy-five more and left four unaccounted for in the explosion of the Atlantic Pyroxylin Waste Company plant at North Arlington N. J. The blast sent a mass of blazing celluloid into the air to ignite nearby homes. Wilbur Appleyard Jr., 4, burned to death in the crib pictured here while three other occupants of the house also lost their lives.

time, has been attempting to interfere with the operation of the highway department. He described the board's action as discourteous, claiming the proposals he submitted should be approved so he could wind up his program before stepping out of office.

"The incoming commissioner has made several attempts to interfere with the purchase of supplies needed now." Dillman stated. "He proposes to put bituminous material on the roads at the height of summer traffic, which is the worst thing to do.

"I have proceeded in good faith on a program. None of the contracts could be let until after Van Wagoner had assumed office. He could economize all he pleased. Despite the discourteous attitude of the incoming commissioner and the board I shall continue to operate the highway department until July 1 in the interests of the people of the state. They are interested in roads, not politics."

Probe Of Rackets By State Suggested

Detroit, June 13 (AP)—Judge W. McKay Skillman, now conducting a grand jury investigation of rackets and lobbying activities in Wayne county, today recommended to Attorney General Patrick H. O'Brien that the attorney general's office begin an investigation into similar alleged activities outside the jurisdiction of the Wayne county court.

Judge Skillman made public his letter to the attorney general after it had been revealed that Norman Buckner, head of a Pontiac loan company had admitted before the grand jury that he paid money to lobbyists in connection with pending legislation affecting small loan companies.

The loan company head had testified that he paid an undetermined sum to Constatine (Teeny) Daniels, Grand Rapids lobbyist, a year or more ago to "present our case to the legislature." He also admitted paying $1,700 in February to Frances Thompson, of the Household Finance Co., of Chicago, but denied that it was for lobbying purposes.

Otto Kahn Will Be Called By Senate Banking Committee

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Senate investigators of private banking today announced officials of Kuhn, Loeb and company would be called to the committee's witstand on June 26 as their inquiry resumes again where it left off last week with J. P. Morgan and company.

The central figure on the committee's stage, in place of J. P. Morgan, will be Otto H. Kahn, senior partner of Kuhn, Loeb and company, who was born in Germany in 1867, the same year Morgan was born here.

Kahn, known throughout the world as a financier, is equally famous as a patron of music.

Decision to resume the inquiry this month instead of waiting until fall was reached today at a meeting of the senate banking subcommittee in charge of the investigation, attended by Ferdinand Pecora, its counsel.

Washington Post Bought By Meyer

Washington, June 12 (AP)—Eugene Meyer, former governor of the federal reserve board, announced tonight he was the sole stock owner of the Washington Post which was sold at auction last week for $825,000.

It was announced Meyer would be president of the new company formed to control the paper, Mrs. Meyer, vice president, and Floyd R. Harrison, for 11 years an associate of Meyer secretary-treasurer.

Reichert Confirmed By State Senate

Lansing, June 13 (AP)—The senate today confirmed Governor Comstock's reappointment of Rudolph E. Reichert, Republican state banking commissioner, by the reported comfortable vote of 21 to 8.

Collapse of the opposition to Reichert's reappointment proved surprising as Democratic leaders had predicted a hard fight on confirmation. The opposition was led by a Republican, Senator Joseph C. Foster, of Lansing. With the exception of Foster, Republicans voted as a unit for Reichert.

Reichert was first appointed in 1927 by former Governor Fred W. Green. Except for a brief period two years ago when he assumed the presidency of the now defunct American Savings Bank in Detroit, he has remained continuously at his post since that time.

Credit For Trade With Russia Sought

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Government credit is being sought to finance trade with Soviet Russia.

Former Senator Brookhart of Iowa, trade advisor to the new farm credit administration, and representatives of Amtorg, the Soviet trade agency in this country, have discussed the possibility of obtaining Reconstruction corporation credit to finance cotton purchases here. A final decision still is pending.

It was said at the corporation's office today that no definite figure has been discussed. Elsewhere it was reported an initial advance of $5,000,000 was under consideration and that if this were granted additional loans would be sought.

Prohibition Bureau To Be Transferred

Washington, June 13 (AP)—With the prohibition bureau slated to lose its identity late in the summer, Attorney General Cummings is working out the details of a plan for merging it with the justice department's bureau of investigation.

Many employes in each agency will not be needed after President Roosevelt's executive order, now before congress, becomes effective, but Cummings said today there would be no slackening of prohibition enforcement.

The attorney general said it would be several weeks before the plans for rearranging the bureaus could be completed and that he had not decided whether both investigation agencies would be completely merged or whether they would remain as separate units under a directing chief to eliminate duplicating functions. Neither has a decision been made as to how the field offices of the two bureaus will be affected.

VETERANS AID STILL ABATED

the independent offices supply bill carrying the hotly disputed provisions for veterans allowances.

The measure was returned because the conferees had eliminated a $1,000,000 fund voted by the senate for hospitalizing veterans, regardless of the origin of their injuries, in 15,000 empty beds for which no money is available for maintenance or attendants.

It did not involve directly the broader question of the house-administration veterans' relief compromise and the proposed substitute of Senators Cutting (R., N. M.) and Steiwer (R., Ore.) but was considered strongly indicative of their comparative strength.

President Behind House

In arguing against sending the bill back to conference, the Democratic leadership did not intimate President Roosevelt had advised them he would veto the bill if veterans' allowances were liberalized too much for his budget-balancing program.

This information they were saving for a floor announcement in the final battle.

The chief executive, standing firmly behind the house compromise which he accepted, has informed his spokesmen he would not accept either the Steiwer-Cutting proposal or the so-called Connally amendment adopted originally by the senate.

Twenty-seven Republicans, including Vandenberg of Michigan, and 20 Democrats, joined by Shipstead (F. L., Minn.), sent the bill back to conference, over the votes of 30 Democrats and Hale (R., Me.).

The count was considered as assuring sufficient votes to pass tomorrow the Cutting-Steiwer substitute, which probably would throw the veterans issue into a sharp deadlock between the senate on one hand and the house and President Roosevelt on the other.

After Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, had moved the recess until 11 a. m. tomorrow, Senator Byrnes (D., S. C.), in charge of the bill, said conferees would resume their meetings tomorrow.

As it now stands, the plan is to restore the $1,000,000 hospitalization fund, advocated by Senator Black (D., Ala.), who moved to recommit the bill to conference, and return with it for a vote.

Senate Lethargy On Bradley Bill Arouses House Ire

Lansing, June 13. (AP)—Angered at the refusal of the senate to pass a bill sponsored by Speaker Martin R. Bradley, proposing the establishment of a permanent legislative council, the house today abruptly refused further to consider senate measures.

The strife was short lived. Shortly after the house had adjourned in a huff the senate took up the twice defeated Bradley bill and rushed it through to passage. Wednesday the house will resume consideration of senate bills.

Rep. William M. Donnelly, Democrat, Detroit, challenged the members of the house to "quit being poltroons."

"There is no reason why the senate should oppose this bill. We have extended every courtesy to the other branch. If we do not take a firm stand now they will bluff us out. As far as I am concerned no senate bill will go through the house until the senate produces the votes for the Bradley bill," he said.

Mortgage Relief Measure Is Signed

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Voicing an appeal to creditors of small homeowners to abstain from foreclosures, President Roosevelt today signed the bill making $2,000,000,000 available for refinancing mortgages.

"It will, of course," he said in a formal statement, "take a little while to set up the machinery necessary to carry the principles of the act into effect.

"In the meantime, I appeal to mortgage creditors and all others who have claims against home owners and ask them, until full opportunity has been given to make effective the refinancing provisions of the home mortgage act, that they abstain from bringing foreclosure proceedings and that they abstain from seeking to dispossess the home owners who are in debt to them."

ations for the University of Michigan, for direct welfare relief, schools, and Michigan State college.

The $15,000,000 school bill was reported with a promise of arguments on the floor over the proposed allocation plan. With the primary school fund tax against utilities estimated to yield $[illegible],000,000, the schools would get approximately $31,000,000 from the state if the bill passes. Senator William F. Doyle, Republican, Menominee, member of the committee, said a floor fight is probable over a provision for a local 3-mill tax as a basis for state aid. He favors a 2-mill levy.

An appropriation of $12,000,000 for relief was reinstated by the committee in releasing the welfare bill. The sum had been stricken from the measure by the house pending action on the sales tax bill. Plans are to hold up passage of the bill until definite action is taken on the sales levy.

The University of Michigan would receive $3,300,000 under the plan of the committee. Its appropriation in the bill released today is fixed at $2,800,000 but the committee took cognizance of a $500,000 appropriation for the institution in the sales tax bill now in conference. The house voted $2,654,000 and the bill probably will go to conference. Michigan State college's appropriation was approved at $900,000 by the committee with an additional sum of $200,000 from the sales tax. The house figure was $1,000,000.

On a recount of votes, the present holder of the office was declared winner by 119 votes, and Dr. Miller at once filed charges of irregularity.

PRICE OF IRON ORE ADVANCES

More Blast Furnaces Being Reopened; 48% Operating

Steelmakers, besieged with inquiries for prices for third quarter, still are unable to commit themselves, owing to uncertainties as to how the Wagner law will affect their costs, states the magazine Steel. It now appears that they will limit contracts to one month, or even shorter periods, after July 1 and until the industrial situation becomes clearer.

Prospects for wage advances in July are becoming more definite; employe representation plans for contacts between employers and employes on wages and working conditions are being fostered by federal legislation. Steel-makers regard the situation as highly unsettled, with all indications pointing to a further upswing in prices.

48% Operating

Meanwhile, demand for iron and steel continues to broaden, imparting strength to the markets. At Pittsburgh four more blast furnaces were blown in during the week, and three others there are being prepared for early operation. Three additional stacks in the Buffalo district will resume shortly.

Steelworks operations in the past week advanced one point to a national average of 48 per cent. Production of ingots in May rose 36 per cent to a daily average of 74,148 gross tons. The most notable improvement last week was a 5-point rise to 35 per cent, at Pittsburgh.

Though the Edgar Thomson rail mills finished the rolling of rails, seven open hearths were continued to supply sheet bars for the leading interest's sheet and tin plate mills.

Sheet specifications at Pittsburgh are the heaviest in two years. One northern Ohio sheet interest has raised its operating schedule for June to 100 per cent. Tin plate mill operations hold close to 90 per cent; export inquiries are heavier, including one for 40,000 tons.

Farm implement orders are increasing, enabling some of the Middle Western manufacturers to schedule operations this summer. Reflecting a stronger demand for wire, the leading interest is opening all departments of its works at Farrell, Pa., on regular 8-hour turns.

Railroads continue to buy sparingly; the Norfolk & Western is to place 10,000 tons of rails this week. In structural steel, awards for the week shrank to 5499 tons, including 2000 tons for a bridge in Wyandotte county, Kans., and 1500 tons for a tin mill building for the Inland Steel Co. at Indiana Harbor, Ind. For a health center in New York, 3225 tons have been awarded tentatively; and for the Rip Van Winkle bridge at Hudson, N. Y., 12,000 tons are about to be placed.

In plates, Richfield Oil Co., Los Angeles, has awarded 1500 tons for storage tanks; and the Pan-American Refining Co. is negotiating a large tonnage for refineries at Texas City, Tex. Oakland, Calif., has purchased 1500 tons of cast iron pipe. Cast pipe prices have been advanced $3 a ton at Chicago and Birmingham.

Pig Iron already released in the Great Lakes district for June shipment represents a heavier tonnage than all shipments in May. The movement of coke is the best in 15 months. Renewed buying of scrap is expected at Chicago.

Lake Superior iron ore prices have been reestablished at last year's levels—the fifth consecutive season they have been in effect—on large purchases by steelworks.

Steel's iron and steel composite this week is up 16 cents to $28.75, on increases in sheet prices at Pittsburgh; the finished steel composite has advanced 20 cents to $45.30; and the scrap composite is up 9 cents to $9.46.

CONDITIONS IMPROVE

AT LAST, it appears as if the general improvement in business that has been experienced in other sections of the country has spread its beneficial influence upon our own community.

Announcement that the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber company at Gladstone and the Delta Chemical and Iron company at Wells are expanding operations was exceedingly cheerful news. This will mean work for over a couple hundred men, and will make a sizable dent in the county unemployment situation.

There can be no real prosperity until the unemployed go back to work in private industry. We have begun to realize that the mere upturn of stock market prices or the launching of public works, to be paid for someday by the taxpayers, do not afford us anything that is substantial and permanent. Real jobs are what count.

We have been cheered by so many false hopes within the last three years, that we now hesitate to make an optimistic prediction. However, the nation's economic situation does look to be greatly improved in all quarters.

In the upper peninsula, particularly, the outlook has brightened considerably in recent weeks. Opening up of steel and iron manufactures in the lower lake districts has spurred the demand for iron ores. Upper peninsula mines are reopening and many miners are returning to work. The lumber industry, upon which this section is also dependent, is also looking up, with demand and prices much more favorable.

The bright spots we see close at hand are not isolated instances of business improvement. Authoritative business charts show that the upward trend embraces virtually all fields of activity. We have every reason to feel that better times are in store for us.

BANDEEN RESIGNS

O. I. BANDEEN, former secretary of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce and recently manager of the Flint Chamber of Commerce, has resigned his position at Flint to become associated, in an executive position, with the Chevrolet Motor company.

In going into private industry, Mr. Bandeen leaves behind him a long and impressive record in public affairs, since chamber of commerce work is to be considered as distinctly in the field of public service as is any government position. He came to Escanaba in 1921 to become the first full-time secretary of the chamber of commerce, and it was largely through his efforts that this organization gained its firm foundation and high standing in the community.

Mr. Bandeen did much of the preliminary work that was done in the development of the so-called Escanaba Plan for obtaining state financial aid in the equalization of educational opportunities in the wealthy and poor school districts. This plan finally resulted in the Turner Act fund of $2,000,000 distributed annually to the poorer districts, but which was eliminated this year under the provisions of the 15-mill limitation amendment. The essential idea of this plan still persists in Michigan, and the $15,000,000 school aid fund, proposed in a bill now before the legislature, also provides for a certain proportion of the sum to be distributed on an equalization basis.

The Press offers to Mr. Bandeen its best wishes for success in his new undertaking; feeling confident, incidentally, that he will achieve that objective.

A GREAT LOSS

DESTRUCTION of the Swedish Mission church edifice by fire yesterday morning was a regrettable incident, and the community extends its sympathy to the members of the congregation.

Such a loss is always the cause for genuine grief. Those who have worshipped for years at the church will feel that they have been robbed of something that has been intimately associated with their lives. They have made sacrifices, undoubtedly, and have labored diligently in the interests of the church, much of which has been undone by the fire.

The church has always been and will be an integral and necessary part of community life. It is to be hoped that the congregation of the Swedish Mission church will find it possible soon to build anew from the ruins of yesterday's fire.

TRUSTEES REELECTED

FRANK O. BECK and Louis N. SCHEMMEL, president and secretary of the Escanaba board of education, respectively, were returned to office in Monday's annual school election by large majorities, indicating that their service has been appreciated by the citizens.

Mr. Schemmel has served as a school trustee for 12 years, while Mr. Beck has been on the board since 1926. They have been serving through a period, which has been probably the most critical in the history of education. Undoubtedly, the job has been far from being enjoyable sinecure.

These are times when the voters are usually against the "ins", but the fact that Escanaba citizens turned against the prevailing custom and reelected them should be the source of much satisfaction to President Beck and Secretary Schemmel.

JUSTICE IN ONTONAGON

IN TERMS of justice, the net result of the arraignment of two Gogebic county men before a justice in Ontonagon county wasn't very satisfactory, in the judgment of many sportsmen who are riled up over wholesale violations of conservation laws.

The two men in question, along with a third whose arrest remains to be made, were originally charged with spearing pike in Lake Gogebic and with resisting officers who tried to arrest them, making their escape. For several weeks the two men were sought, the conservation department incurring considerable expense in the search for the three men who escaped when they were surprised by conservation officers. It would have been a travesty on justice to drop the charges, hence the department was forced to keep on the trail of the men and bring them into court. Arraigned in the justice court at Ontonagon, one man was placed on probation and the other had his fine suspended on promise of good behavior in the future. The charge of resisting officers was dropped.

While there may have been extenuating circumstances which prompted the justice to let the offenders off as lightly as he did, in contrast to the justice at Marenisco who gave three men jail sentences on similar charges, it is difficult for sportsmen of Ontonagon and Gogebic counties to understand the disposition of the two cases in Ontonagon. Wholesale spearing of fish, dynamiting of streams and other flagrant violations will not cease as long as justice is administered in that manner. Flagrant violators must be dealt with severely if their offenses against the people of the state are to be minimized.

It remains for the courts to fall in line with the sentiment of the public if flagrant violations are to be curbed.—Ironwood Globe.

BARGAIN BRIDE

By KATHARINE HAVILAND TAYLOR

CHAPTER I

Barrett Colvin, bronzed by sun-baked miles of sand, sat forward so that he might see the windows of Fifth Avenue. It was a bit earlier than mid-afternoon but many windows were warm with the yellow glow that is a glare by night. The skies were sullenly low and there was a drizzle in the chilly air. The English, Barrett reflected, would call it "a dirty day." To the average New Yorker, it was "rotten weather." Those folks upon whom he had recently turned his broad back would call it "the will of Allah." Well, the faith of the East was the most comfortable but Barrett didn't share it.

He moved uneasily and lit a cigaret. It was always unsatisfactory to come back. Memories that seared his mind would leap from embers. A corner of an uptown street or an old building would brush away 10 years to make him see Marcia, his tempestuous little sister the daughter of his father's second wife. Marcia, violent in her trap. Marcia crying, "Barry, you must help me; I've no one else!"

He had intended to help her, but with the passing of years he had been less and less certain about what he had done by putting himself between her and the storm. He had made it easy, without meaning to, for her to evade her responsibility and to live a lie.

And now Marcia was married. She had written Barret, "Of course Dick doesn't know." And here, from her evasion, was another problem and one of the oldest ones—a problem discussed often in "Advice to the Lovelorn" columns in answers to letters usually beginning, "Shall I tell the man I am going to marry, etc." Almost always the description of the unfortunate affair ended with a wistful, "I was so young."

Barrett Colvin tossed his half-smoked cigaret from the lowered taxicab window to lean back, already wearied of civilization which is not always so ordered as it seems.

He hoped Dick Radnor deserved the devotion he had won from Marcia. The facts might so easily come out in time, Barrett reflected, and unless Dick were the man Marcia thought him to be there would be the devil to pay.

He must go up to see the boy, Marcia's boy, Barrett decided, as soon as he could manage to get away from town. Marcia did not care for him as she should and it wasn't fair to the youngster. He must have grown a good heal, Barrett reflected. It was four years—a broad four years—since he had seen the child whom Marcia had implored him to "adopt" and whom he had adopted.

Barrett Colvin felt a little tingle when the taxicab turned into a sedate old street where brownstone-fronted houses told of other times and other manners. This was getting home. No matter how far one wandered or how insistent the call of distant countries, for every man some one house or some one woman meant "home."

The door was opened as the taxicab came to a sudden halt. Higgins, the butler, appeared, obviously excited to have "Mr. Barrett" home again. The chauffeur swung several scarred, bulging bags from the car to the walk. Higgins' eyes were fixed upon his master, his voice almost tremulous.

In a window across the street Barrett saw the imperious head of Miss Ella Sexton, saw her nod stiffly and wave a handkerchief so black-bordered as to suggest a death of yesterday.

Barrett, after bowing deeply, went up the brown stone steps of his home. So little was changed. The glimpse of Miss Ella, the charactertistic tilt of her aristocratic nose, told him that she still ruled sternly and coldly over all those who waited her death.

At the door, which Higgins held open, Barrett turned again and as he did so saw a girl hurrying up the steps of Miss Ella's house. A pretty picture she made with her young grace and energy.

"One of the Thropes?" he asked Higgins.

"No, Mr. Barrett. That is Miss Elinor Stafford. She's grown a deal these four years, sir."

Barrett nodded. His smile widened. He remembered Elinor Stafford dimly as a gawky youngster with a brace on her teeth, a youngster with an especial talent for stumbling. He had met her at Miss Ella's house—the golden shrine for all those relatives who felt they should be remembered in the Sexton will.

The hall and Higgins shutting the world away with a closed door. How good it was to be home! The same dimmed, lovely tapestry. The same ancient hat rack that Barrett kept because, looking at it, he could sometimes fancy he saw his father's hat on the black marble surface, his mother's small gloves and card case.

"It's good to be here again, Higgins."

"And it's good to have you, sir!"

Barrett saw that Higgins' eyes held tears and he laid a strong hand on the old man's arm. With a gentleness that, combined with his strength, beckoned too many weak mortals his way, Barret asked, "I hope you've been well, Higgins?"

"Yes, Mr. Barrett. Now and again a bit lonely—not that I mean to complain, sir! I think you'll find everything as you want it, Mr. Barrett."

"I'm certain everything's in fine shape."

"The harbor was foggy, I presume, sir?" Higgins asked as he took Barertt's coat, weighted by the wet in the day's air.

"Pretty thick—"

"Quite four hours late, you are, sir; I've been watching by the window."

"Lucky to get in, at all."

"I presume so. You've lunched, sir?"

"Yes, thought I'd better. By the by, are there any letters?"

"A number, sir. On your desk—"

A few minutes later when Barratt was poking through his mail—frankly and naively surprised at its bulk—Marcia came hurrying in. "Darling!" she called from the doorway of the big, dark room. He turned, rose and she was in his arms, crying, laughing, clinging to him.

"The same huge thing," she exclaimed breathlessly, standing away, "and so famous, dear! You don't know what you're in for! I haven't been to a dinner this winter that someone hasn't said, 'So Barrett Colvin is your brother? How remarkable!' I don't supose I do look as though I could possibly be related to anyone so brainy. Oh, it is good to see you, dear!"

She pressed close again and for a moment hid her face against the top button of his waistcoat. Then she drew away and raised her face to let him see her smile and her misted eyes.

"I'm so frightfully happy," she admitted. "Dick's such a perfect husband! And to think you haven't even met him! Darling—may I have a cocktail?"

Barrett rang for Higgins, at the same time studying Marcia. She had grown lean, hungry-looking, nervous. He hadn't remembered those sudden, angular mannerisms.

"You're pretty stringy, Marcia," he said perplexedly.

"Darling, everyone is! You'll

LEAVE ME THIS

He said to me, "If someone came
To me tonight with words aflame,
Some inspiration, some new creed,
And said to me, who saw my need,
'Here is a new philosophy
Obliterating memory,
Upon the past I'll close the door,
You need not sorrow for her more'—

'If so one came, then I would say,
'Take your philosophy away,
And touch me with no magic wand
So I forget the once so fond.
Although my nights are nights of tears,
Although my life a length of years,
Although my happiness I miss,
I have my sorrow—leave me this.'

"I have my sorrow—this, at least,
Has not diminished or decreased.
Would I alone in joy be true,
In grief forgetting her I knew?
God give me strength—not to forget,
But only to remember yet,
No, leaving me kneeling at her shrine,
My only joy this grief of mine."

Word was received in the city yesterday of the death at Gladstone after a prolonged illness of Mrs. C. H. MacLaurin, well known here. Mrs. Elizabeth Gagnon MacLaurin was born in Wilson and when a child of seven moved with her parents to Gladstone.

Herman Haberman, superintendent of the Gladstone municipal light plant, met instant death late yesterday afternoon by electrocution while engaged in attaching power wires, carrying 2300 volts of electricity to a new cross-arm that he had placed on a pole near Delta avenue and Seventh street.

Rev. Frederick Spence of Saginaw, former fastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of this city, will deliver the principal address at the Independence Day exercises at Ludington park.

August E. Wennerstrom of Culver Military academy, Culver, Ind., will give a lecture at the Swedish Methodist church on the Titanic disaster. He is one of the survivors who was picked up by the Carpathia.

NEW ELECTRIC ERA DAWNING

Inventions Will Benefit Many Users of Current

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the final story in a series of six on power, its rise and its significance as a national issue to every citizen.

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Writer

Washington — The Muscle Shoals project definitely launches the United States government into paths it has never trod before. It is not mere government production and sale of power. It is regional and social planning on a scale that scarcely Russia itself has attempted.

There are details, too, of the Muscle Shoals act which mark out new paths. For instance, it provides that all members of the board (of the Tennessee Valley Authority) "shall be persons who profess a belief in the feasibility and wisdom of this act." No such provision has ever before been incorporated in a federal law. Hitherto the oath of administration has been considered sufficient.

But this is an attempt to insure sympathetic administration. "Surely it is not too much to ask that this project be carried through by its friends," Senator Norris, "grandfather" of Muscle Shoals," explained to the writer. "We have seen similar legislation virtually nullified in the past by administrators who followed the letter of the law, perhaps, but who plainly did not believe in what they were doing, and thus did not give it a fair chance."

"No Politics!"

The Muscle Shoals act also contains severe penalties for allowing any political slant to creep into the distribution of its jobs. Directors are specifically forbidden to have outside interests, especially power interests. Wage rates may not be less than the prevailing rate in the vicinity as revealed by collective bargaining agreements.

States, counties, municipalities and co-operative organizations get first call on any power produced. Commonwealth and Southern has offered to buy all surplus power produced, and hopes, in a recent report, that the government will not really build transmission lines and sell power itself, inasmuch as Commonwealth will distribute over its present lines "at rates that will give full recognition to any savings made by the government in the cost of generation." The act specifically permits building of such lines, however, and it appears likely that the government will do it.

But the really revolutionary side of the Muscle Shoals experiment is shown by the provision in the act for "surveys and general plans for said Tennessee basin and adjoining territory as may be useful to the Congress and the several states in guiding and controlling the extent, sequence and nature of development that may be equitably and economically advanced through the expenditure of public funds . . . all for the purpose of fostering an orderly and proper physical, economic, and social development of said areas." Which would seem to include practically anything.

Roosevelt's Aims

How far does President Roosevelt expect to go with public ownership? His own words in "Looking Forward" are the best guide: "Let us be clear at the outset that the liberty of individuals to carry on their business should not be abrogated unless the larger interests of the many are concerned . . . I do not hold with those who advocate government ownership of all utilities . . .

"As a broad general rule, the development of utilities should remain, with certain exceptions, a function for private initiative and private capital. But the exceptions are of vital importance . . . The natural hydroelectric power resources belonging to the people should forever remain in their possession . . . Never shall the federal government part with its sovereignty and control over its power resources while I am president of the United States."

A Social Experiment

Private utilities complain that there is neither industry nor dense population in the Tennessee Valley to use the power after it is generated. The administration plan seems to be to attract both there with the bait of cheap power. Dr. Arthur Morgan, who leaves soon for his $10,000 job as director at the Shoals, aims at no less than creation of a new balance between rural and urban population, a sort of new kind of region in which country folk can work in factories and still live in the country. Dr. Morgan has been quoted as saying that the objective is no less than "to teach the American people in rural communities how to live."

Thus it may be seen that Muscle Shoals is more important as a social experiment than as an addition to the power industry. Other experiments now under way may make a greater difference in power within the next few years.

Power companies are continually experimenting with processes to make cheaper power, seeking new inventions which may at any time bring far-reaching changes in the whole business.

Improvements Loom

Experiments are under way by General Electric and other companies with the vacuum-tube principle in transforming electrical current for transmission without too great loss. Should distance thus be eliminated as a factor, the way would be open for making any water power electricity, no matter how remote, available in almost any city. It would also permit building of generating plants at the coal mines, shipping the power rather than as at present, shipping the coal. Transmission of power by radio and without transmission lines is a dream no wilder than some already realized.

The rivalry between steam and water plants continues. The best steam turbines today convert only about 30 per cent of the energy released by the burning fuel into electrical energy. That leaves nearly a 70 per cent improvement possible as processes become more efficient.

America already has three mercury-vapor generators in operation; mercury is boiled in a closed system, its vapor turning a turbine, and then passing under water which the mercury vapor turns to steam as it gives up its heat, the steam turning a second turbine. The two turbines are more efficient than one. Applications of the Diesel engine principle are also being made in the field of power generation.

A New Era Dawns

The Federal Power Commission actually has before it a definite proposal to utilize the 60-foot tides of Passamaquoddy Bay as a source of power, just as England proposes to build a barrage to draw power from the tidal waters of the Severn. The warm currents of the Gulf Stream, prevailing winds across a Jersey meadow, the sun's rays falling on a row of sensitized copper disks, the inscrutable core of the atom itself, all these are being studied as possible future sources of power."

Future uses of electricity seem almost unlimited. Only two per cent of the railroads are now electrified. Truck gardeners are using electric wires for soil heating, thus beating Mother Nature out of several weeks' time in the spring. Central cooling and heating, as well as cooking, appear to offer an unlimited field. New uses for electricity are being devised almost daily. The problem is to see that the maximum benefit goes to the maximum number of people.

The new Electrical Era is dawning. As Senator Norris puts it, "Some day we are going to have electricity in every home just as we have water; some day it is going to be on every farm; some day every stream that trickles down the mountainside is going to perform service for mankind . . . it is as sure as is the law of gravitation."

notice it. May I have a cigaret? Thank you so much. I've been tearing all day. Always so much to do—" She dropped to a chair as Higgins appeared at the doorway. "Good afternoon, Higgins. Will you bring me a Manhattan?"

Higgins murmured greeting, bowed and departed. Marcia sat forward on her chair.

"I want to talk to you about a lot of things, Barrett. Are you too frightfully tired?"

"Not at all," he answered and tried valiantly to stifle the conviction that she would have gone on, no matter what his answer.

"Well, in the first place," she began, and then paused. She drew a deep, unsteady breath, sat forward and continued. "I've been—uncomfortable lately about what happened before you went away. It's bothered me more than ever before. More even than when I realized—"

Again she paused. Barrett's eyes grew sympathetic. He knew what it must cost her to say all this.

Marcia went on again. "When I realized," she repeated, moistening her full, scarlet-tinted lips, "about—Lon Moore—what a fool I'd been—everything!"

Barrett glanced at the hand holding her cigaret, noticed how it shook and glanced quickly away. "Poor child!" he thought. "Poor child!" The pain of others always aroused in him a blend of fierceness, tenderness and strength.

Marcia drew another deep breath before going on with her story. "Dick's extremely conservative. All his life his father went to his office at exactly 9 each morning and left it at the stroke of 4. He never varied. And Dick's mother still feels that no 'lady' appears on the streets before 6 in the evening with a bare throat. She wears those funny little boned net collars. Dick adores her and—oh, I know it all sounds terribly mixed up!" She sagged back for a second. "I can't seem to tell the story but—they're that way, all of them, about everything! Never getting away from the path of what they're supposed to do. I wish I could make you understand!"

"I think I follow better than you suppose," Barrett put in gently.

"I hope so, Barrett. I'm so terribly alone!"

It was Marcia's old cry, always voiced while someone else shouldered her burdens. "You see," she went on, "for a man, Dick has lived with such decency. He's absolutely certain I was completely innocent and inexperienced when we were married. Oh, Barrett, if he knew the truth he'd never get over it! Never! I'm afraid to risk it. I—I can't live without Dick—now."

Her eyes blurred. Barrett saw her lips tremble. "But what is it that's set you to thinking about all this?" he asked, leaning toward her.

"Well, partly it's seeing so much of Dick's family and finding out how they feel about things. The Radnors are so truthful it's almost a trial to dine with them. The other day Dick found a new servant had lied and—he dismissed her!"

"He didn't love her," Barrett pointed out, smiling a little.

"No, but could he love anyone who lied?" Marcia questioned, a break in her voice. She went on quickly without waiting for an answer. "But that's only part of it. In January I'm going to have a child!"

"My dear!" Barrett leaned forward to lay a hand upon hers. "I'm so happy for you!"

She smiled and for a moment the smile dispelled the somberness that could so easily eclipse her dark, Spanish beauty. Her hand turned beneath his to grip his fingers.

"Thanks, Barry. Sweet of you. But what I wanted to say—Dick's—my child—must not be threatened!"

"I don't follow you."

"Well, Mr. Dexter brought the boy to town the other day," she stated.

"But I don't see—"

"He brought him to see me. He presented himself—and the child—in the most assured manner. Dwight was away, thank heaven! A new maid whom I dismissed immediately let him in. Mr. Dexter said he thought I would want to see my brother's ward. There was something in the way he said it, Barry—"

"I'll attend to that," Barrett promised angrily. "What happened?"

"Well, he said your check for his salary had been delayed and that he needed the money."

"He lied. Did you give him anything?"

"Yes. All I had at the moment, I think a little over $200."

"That was very foolish, dear," Barrett commented levelly. He stared, frowning, at a rug at his feet.

"I was in terror for fear he'd stay until Dick came. There's a strong family resemblance about the boy. He looks so much like you, Barrett. He's going to be tall and lean and strong and he has the same square chin. Anyone seeing him would notice it. They couldn't fail to. I want you to—get him out of the country."

She leaned toward her half-brother. "Barry—you'll help me?" she asked. She added weakly, "There's no one else to whom I can turn. No one else!"

Barrett rose to his feet to pace the room. He was aware of Higgins entering, carrying a shaker and tall-stemmed glass on a tray, of Higgins mending the fire and tip-toeing away. Marcia, a small, smouldering, dark beauty, sagged back in the chair she made seem large. She sipped her cocktail, set it down on a nearby table, and the click of glass meeting mahogany was loud in the heavy stillness.

At last Barrett spoke. "I can't promise you anything," he said almost harshly. "I'll have to see what is best for the boy."

"Barry, you're not going to be unreasonable about this?" she asked plaintively.

He smiled a little mirthlessly. Anyone who dared to oppose Marcia was invariably "unreasonable." But, poor child, that was not her fault. She had been pampered, petted, indulged absurdly, and that fact had made her tragedy.

"I must do what I feel to be fair to the boy," Barrett repeated, "and I'll start by firing Dexter," he ended grimly.

"If people see him and hear he's your adopted son they'll think he's—more than adopted," Marcia pointed out. "He looks—so like you now!"

"I know that," Barrett agreed. "I've always known it. We have strong characteristics as a family. But I'm not worrying about that, Marcia. I want to be certain to do the thing that is best for you, for him, for everyone."

"Oh," she murmured miserably. For a second she closed her eyes. Opening them, she glanced at a small, jeweled watch that ticked against her wrist. She rose quickly and Barrett rose. "I must be off," she said in almost her natural way. "We've a dinner engagement. And, dear, when are you coming to see us? Not that I quite know when we're free, but I'll look it up and let you know. Will you come to dinner?"

"Of course."

"We haven't time now to settle anything but I know you'll come to my view point. You'll realize it's the only one!"

"We'll see. I'm only trying to be fair."

"You won't be fair to me if you keep me in terror!" she contested hotly.

"I think we'd better not discuss it now, dear," he said firmly. She raised her slender shoulders. Her chin went high. Without a word she turned toward the hall.

Frowning, he followed her unhappily. He saw her pick up a pair of gloves from the table, watched her pull them on with two sharp tugs. He hoped Marcia wasn't going to leave him angry. He had looked forward eagerly to seeing her, his small half-sister and only relative. Stifling a sigh, he stared down at her, so small, so seemingly frail but capable, he knew, of bitterness and artfully wrought plans for revenge.

She raised her heavy eyelids for a moment to give him an insolent, chill glance. Then she melted, to cling to him sobbing and laughing.

"I am a beast, Barry! But—you must help me!"

"I do want to help you, dear," he assured her. He patted her shoulder reassuringly.

"Will you" (She mopped her dark eyes) "come and have a long talk with me—soon?"

"Whenever you have a free moment, telephone and I'll come running!" he promised.

"Barry, you are so sweet!" she broke out and, to his embarrassment, kissed his big, tanned hand. She had always been as extravagant in showing love as hate. Barrett wished he had not had to remember that fact.

He held her mink coat a moment later. "I worry, too, Barry," she was saying, "because the boy looks so much like you. People who hear that he's your ward will think—you know—that he is your son, hidden to save—shame—"

Marcia's back was toward him. Barrett realized she was hoping by repeating this suggestion to frighten him into exiling her son, small Gerald Moore. She should have known him better than that!"

"As I said before, Marcia," he pointed out slowly, "I realized that possibility when I adopted him. As a family we are a rather pronounced type. But my own peace and comfort would never let me hide him."

"Oh, well—" she flung out petulantly. He followed her down the steps, tucking a sleek rug around her knees as the chauffeur waited instructions. Standing at the open door Barrett felt the heat reaching toward him from the car in which orchids trembled in their silver vase.

Vanity case, mirror, cushions, foot rests, cigarets, lighters—all were within the car and the windows were firmly closed to keep out any chill. Barrett thought, "Unnatural and wrong. Makes too much softness, too much shielding just as I have—"

Marcia interrupted his thoughts. "Dick is longing to meet you. You will come soon?" she asked.

"Any evening you name."

She glanced idly across the street, turned quickly to the chauffeur. "Jenson!" she said crisply, "please step across the street to ask Miss Stafford if I may drive her home—"

Barrett felt his heart rise. Coming down the steps of the house opposite was the girl he had seen before. The girl who had been "little Elinor Stafford" and an ugly duckling. She was beautiful now, he saw, as she crossed the windy street followed by the stiffly deferential Jensen.

"I'll wager you don't remember me!" he said as she neared the curb.

"Oh, but I do!" the girl contradicted shyly yet with a flush that he did not understand. The grip of her small hand was strong and honest. Her deep violet eyes met his levelly. Barrett felt suddenly within himself a glow of an almost forgotten warmth.

"It was so kind of you, Mrs. Radnor, to offer—" the girl began.

Marcia cut her short. "Hop in, child!" she said. "I'm late now. I meet Dick down town every day to ride home with him. Isn't that incurably romantic?"

"I think it's nice," said Elinor. Barrett laughed; a laugh prompted by pleasure. It was exactly as he would like her to think. "Nice."

"Aunt Ella wants to see you, Mr. Colvin," said Elinor Stafford.

"I'll go to see her very soon," he replied, "but—you used to call me 'Barry' and I resent the change. A man should hang around to keep the home fires burning."

She smiled at him. Marcia consulting her small watch again murmured something about having to hurry on. The door of the car was closed, a moment later the motor purred—and Barrett watched them disappear.

Elinor Stafford, he decided, was the sort of youngster one needed to meet on a day when the air was weighted by chill mist and one's temples were growing gray. She was so different from Marcia with her genius for finding tight corners and for dragging everyone near her into those corners too. Poor passionate, impulsive, blind and selfish Marcia! Well, this time he would think first of the boy who deserved first thought. After all, he and Marcia, though comparatively young, had not the years ahead of them that the child had. Marcia's child, his ward, Gerald Moore.

The house seemed strangely empty as he returned to it, rather dismal and, in spite of a comfortable temperature, a little cold.

For some reason he did not clearly understand a vision of Elinor Stafford's face remained before him. He wondered when he would see her again.

Gessner Is Speaker At Zionist Meeting

Immediate and concerted organization of Jewry in this and other districts of the county through the medium of Zionism and for the furtherance of a unified plan for the protection of Jews in Germany, was the theme of an address given by Joseph H. Cohodes, of Iron Mountain, president of the Upper Peninsula Zionist organization, at a meeting held Sunday at Marinette.

Other speakers were Rabbi Hiatt, of Marinette, Wis., Rabbi Fisher, of this city, and Herman Gessner, of Escanaba. The principal purpose of the gathering was to encourage the immediate building up of Zionist membership in and about Marinette. The meeting was held at the Eagles' hall, about 30 members and delegates attending.

Herman Gessner, of Escanaba, reviewed the work of Zionism in the district and nation during the past several years, and predicted an augmented program and an increased membership.

Committees were appointed to solicit funds for relief of Jews in Germany, and also to build up the Zionist organization in and around Marinette.

The next rally will be held June 25 at Iron River.

At some time in the near future a meeting will be called at which members of the organization will be given an opportunity to hear Henry Weisenberg, former merchant of Marquette, who is now touring Poland, Palestine and other historic nations of Europe. The date has not been definitely set.

CHURCH EDIFICE HAS BAD BLAZE

Building at First Ave. and 14th Wrecked; Sparks Blamed

The Swedish Mission church, First avenue south and Fourteenth street, was badly wrecked by fire Tuesday morning, with damage estimated from $7,000 to $8,000, only partially covered by insurance.

Sparks were blamed by firemen for the blaze, which was first noticed by Mrs. Emil Perron, 1314 First avenue south, and an alarm was turned in at 9:10 a. m. Indications were that chimney sparks caught in the shingle roof of a small projecting addition on the rear of the brick veneer building, and the blaze dropped through to spread quickly through dry partitions.

The roof of the church collapsed within a short time, but all walls remained standing and the recreation basement remained undamaged. Furnishings of the church proper were destroyed when the roof fell, but the sloping floor of the church auditorium drained the water from fire hoses so that it was carried into the furnace room and away from the basement parlors.

The church is a comparatively modern structure, constructed about 20 years ago. Insurance of $4,600 was carried, church officials reported. A meeting of the church board was scheduled for last night to decide the future course of action regarding rebuilding or repair.

AIL TO ACT ON MILK CONTROL

ommish Says More Rigid Code Inadvisable at Present Time

Adoption of more rigid milk ntrol requirements, requested of e city commission, was deemed advisable at the present time, d the question was tabled by e group following discussion d deliberation during a regular ssion Monday evening.

In making the request it was ggested that either Grade A ilk be required instead of Grade or that a 5 or 10 mile zone nit be put into effect so that out- le dealers would not be able to ll milk in Gladstone below the st of production, locally.

In refusing the request it was e concensus of opinion that increasing of higher standardss would e inadvisable at the present time, id so long as the present economic condition exists, and also at the local milk supply was ir and was being effectively olled.

The proposal of zoning in an ort to eliminate outside competition was thought to be questionable from a legal standpoint, id impractible inasmuch as me sources of supply of several alers are outside the immediate cinity and would not, therefore, e subject to control and inspection.

HUNDREDS HERE SIGHT MACON

Giant Dirigible of U. S. Navy Viewed in Flight Towards Soo

Hundreds of Gladstonians yesterday afternoon sought points of vantage to get a glimpse of the U. S. N. dirigible Macon, sister ship to the ill-fated Akron, as it passed within sight enroute from Chicago on a round-the-lakes trial trip to Akron, Ohio.

The ship was first sighted in the proximity of Stonington as it cruised eastward and looked for all the world like a huge silver cigar floating in the air. It was flying low and the tree line on the eastern shore of Little Bay de Noc soon blotted it from view.

It was resighted a short time later far in the distance about due east of Gladstone apparently flying northeast by east. The craft was still at a low altitude and was flying unstably. It nosed up, rode on level keel for a short distance and then would dip.

Reports here stated that the huge craft was disabled by the tearing away of one rudder and that the ship was attempting to reach Sault Ste. Marie.

LIFE GUARD TO BE APPOINTED

Safe Bathing at Local Beach Assured for Summer Months

Safety for swimmers using the local bathing beach at the city park this summer was assured on Monday evening when the city commission voted to again install a trained lifeguard.

Appointment is to be made immediately. The suggestion and recommendation that a guard again be named was made by City Manager F. R. Buechner.

The person named to the position must be fully qualified and trained in rescue and resuscitation methods.

It will be the second year that a lifeguard has been on duty at the local beach. Last year Cecil Latimer was in charge.

Discussion of the annual audit was made but no action was taken pending further submission by auditors of tax levies and the assessor's tax roll.

Presentation by the city manager of the police report for the month of May, operating-income statements of the utilities for April and May together with the balance sheet and bank reconcilement statements, completed the business of the session.

DIAMOND BALL LEAGUE

Brown's Addition, playing excellent ball behind Steinhoff's stellar hurling, took the measure of Miron's Coal Rusters, 6 to 1. Until the fifth inning it was a pitchers' duel between Wilson and Steinhoff but the fishermen got to the latter for four runs which salted away the game.

Before a roaring crowd of 500, the Munising All-Stars gave the Northland Cafe Bears their first defeate, 6 to 1, in a benefit exhibition game, the proceeds of which cleaned up the city league deficit. The contest was fast and clean, but the All-Stars got to Malone in the seventh for four runs. Both clubs are scheduled to meet again in a return game.

The Caslon Bonds had it over the Swedes like a tent in their encounter and the Scandinavians were swamped, 22 to 12, in an unexciting slugfest. Batteries: Swedes, Norberg and Bell; Bonds, Eckdahl and Lasak.

Smarting over their first defeat, the Northland Cafes took it out on the Standard Oils, 9 to 2, in a fast game, the issue of which was in doubt until the sixth canto. The Bears' wrecking crew led by Fisher and Dale fell upon the deliveries of Sidbeck for 14 hits, three of which were home runs. Batteries: Northland Cafes, E. Aribee and Dale; Standard Oils, Sidbeck and Messier.

The game between the Caslon Bonds and the Munising Bottling Works was postponed on account of rain.

The Munising Bottling Works proved themselves a jinx to Miron's Coal Dusters as they annexed their second game from "Philthy Phils'" cohorts, 15 to 12. Both clubs connected solidly with the ball and it was only late in the game that the Pop Makers worked into a safe lead. Batteries: Coal Dusters, Wilson and Lafave; Bottlers, Fuller and Revord.

COUNCIL FIXES 1933 BUDGET

Tax Rate To Be $14.73 Per Thousand; Cut of 16c Under 1932

The city council at the public hearing on the 1933 budget Monday evening fixed the appropriation figure to be raised by taxes at $55,520.53, a reduction of $4,200 from the budget originally submitted. This year's tax rate will be $14.73 per thousand, or a reduction of 16 cents per thousand under the 1932 rate, the rate covering bonds and interest being $2.71 with $12.02 going into the city general fund for operating expenses. The assessed valuation as fixed last week by the board of review is $3,771,775 as compared with $3,866,000 for the year previous.

The council effected the decrease in the budget despite the fact that in the years 1931 and '32, $5,000 of the water department surplus was taken illegally to reduce the amount raised by taxation instead of using it for water department maintenance and repair work. The fact that this amount was not available this year tended to increase the 1933 budget. Decreases were made by cutting appropriations for alley construction, a park road grade, slicing items in the street department, and also in other minor matters.

A $500 appropriation to the chamber of commerce to be used for advertising purposes, was included in the budget as passed. The majority of the council members were in favor of the appropriation, believing it to be a distinct benefit to the city at large. It was explained that the fund is not only used for the maintenance of the tourist information bureau, but that the major portion of the fund is used in the purchase of other advertising media such as the cost of booklets for distribution at St. Ignace, membership in the Hiawathaland Publicity Bureau, slides at the Century of Progress, etc. W. B. Thomas and W. S. Crowe, represented the chamber at the meeting. The latter also outlined a plan for the advertising of a Lake Michigan circuit tour through the publication of large 36 x 42 inch wall maps indicating the route to be followed, the cities enroute, and picturesque legends depicting the attractions at the various points in the drive. The maps, Mr. Crowe stated, would be paid for by the chambers of commerce in the various cities on the circuit. The plan is especially opportune at this time in view of the Century of Progress at Chicago.

Rites For Drowning Victim Incomplete

Funeral arrangements for Fred Olson, 36, Indian Lake victim who drowned Monday evening when he attempted to swim ashore after a motor boat in which he was riding capsized off Ossa Beach in a strong gale, are indefinite pending the arrival of a brother of the deceased from Minneapolis. The body is being prepared for burial at the Gunnarson & Kefauver mortuary. The tragedy was the first at Indian Lake in over eight years.

Olson was evidently seized with cramps as he was an expert swimmer. He had eaten a heavy meal before setting out in the motor boat with three companions with the intention of camping on the shore of the north end of the lake preparatory to fishing for bullheads on the following day.

The boat was heavily laden, and in addition to carrying the four persons, containgd a large tent, storage battery, and provisions. Olson, who was born in Sweden, sailed for many years on the Atlantic. Frank Krul and Robert Anderson, who set off in a boat to rescue those on the craft, saw Olson go down for the third time, but were too late to come within reach.

Farm Mortgage Act Provisions Related By Gottfrid Johnson

Farmers of this county will be interested in the statement from Gottfrid S. Johnson, Michigan director of the Federal Land Bank of Saint Paul, telling of the provisions of the new Emergency Farm Mortgage Act.

For a period of 5 years beginning July 12, the interest rate to Federal Land Bank borrowers on their loans will be reduced to 4 1-2 per cent. This reduction will be made automatically. The rate of interest on oarstanding loans now varies from 5 to 6 per cent, the average being about 5 1-3 per cent.

New loans made through national farm loan associations, during the next two years will bear not to exceed 4 1-2 per cent interest. This rate will continue until July, 1938, and is considerably lower than that which prevails throughout this district.

Loans which are not made through national farm loan associations but directly by the bank will bear one half of one per cent higher rate of interest. If and when such borrowers join an association when formed in their community and if their loans are in good standing, their rate will be reduced one-half of one per cent. All borrowers have to purchase stock either in an association or the bank in an amount equal to 5 per cent of their loans.

Borrowers whose loans are in good standing will not be required to make payments on the principal of their loans during the 5 year period ending July 12, 1938 if they are not in default in the payment of interest, insurance, taxes or other assessments.

During the next two years the banks may issue their bonds in an aggregate not exceeding $2,000,000,000. These bonds may bear an interest rate not to exceed 4 per cent and this interest is to be guaranteed by the United States. They may be sold to the investing public to secure funds to loan or they may be exchanged for first farm mortgages.

Although outhit, 12-8, the Sinclair Oils continued their climb pennantward Monday evening when they defeated Nortons 12-4. Ekdahl led the attack with a home run and a triple, while Chartier and Rousseau contributed three-ply wallops, and McNally a double.

The Bakers gleaned 12 hits off the delivery of Halsey, five of which were bunched in the fifth inning for five runs. Ivan Schuster of the Fords sent out a long home run wallop into left field. BY JOHN L. COOLEY
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, June 13 (AP)—Financial markets showed signs of weariness today, and closing prices in many directions were lower.

Stocks stumbled into selling during the last hour coincident with a rally by dollar exchange. Wheat and rye, after touching new highs, also slid off while cotton and bonds joined the general easing.

Rail shares offered a helping hand to other stocks for a time in the afternoon, but their independent strength failed to draw much response; pivotal industrials, in fact, were noticeable laggards, nor did the utilities exhibit much courage. The dollar's advance, gaining momentum as the day wore on, apparently was a signal for heavy profit-taking toward the close and there was a long list of 1 to 4 point net losses in all stock groups. Sales totaled 6,304,540 shares.

Fast movers of Tuesday's market slid back appreicably, though all of the previous day's gains, on the average, was not quite lost. American Telephone, Case, American Sugar and National Distillers dropped about 4 net.

Wall Street has been rather surprised by the prompt injection of the war debt issue into the London deliberations. As trading closed for the day it was indicated Great Britain planned to offer a ten percent payment on her bill which, whether accepted or rejected, would probably mean that the whole troublesome question of repayments to this country would be brought to a head for settlement.

Trade news continued cheerful. Several western railroads reported larger loadings last week than for either the preceding week or a year ago; measured against volume for the latter period many of the gains were substantial.

"American Metal Market" in its weekly summary of the steel trade's position and prospects said the industry would be "quite busy up to the middle of July as customers will specify very fully on their second quarter contracts for semi-finished and finished steel products on account of prospective price advances." Mills are said to be planning to carry better inventories.

CHICAGO GRAIN
Chicago, June 13—Despite transient upturns to fresh high price records for wheat and rye, all grain values averaged lower today.

Augmented selling developed on every advance, and proved to be a handicap impossible to overcome except during brief intervals. The selling was largely ascribed to profit-taking on the part of eastern speculative holders, and in some quarters was partly ascribed to complaints credited to the secretary of agriculture that recent price advances had interfered with plans to effect acreage reduction in wheat, corn and coton.

Wheat closed nervous, 3-8 to 3-4 under yesterday's finish, corn also 3-8 to 3-4 down, oats 3-8 to 5-8 off, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 15 cents.

Corn prices were inclined to lag owing to continued liberal receipts, with the corn visible supply the largest since 1928. Oats sagged with wheat and corn.

Provisions were easy as a result of scattered selling.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—July, 75, 77 3-4 to 7-8; September, 77 3-8 to 1/2, 80¼ to 3-8; December, 80 to 80 1-8, 82½ to 5-8. Corn—July, 44½, 45 5-8 to 3-4; September, 47 3-8 to ½, 48 3-4 to 7-8; December, 59¼ to 3-4, 51 5-8 to 3-4.

BY VICTOR EUBANK
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, June 13 (AP)—United States government securities and foreign obligations rallied in the bond market today, but elsewhere prices developed an irregularly lower trend.

Some of the speculative loan groups apparently were influenced by the weakness of stocks and the accompanying rally of the American dollar in foreign exchange markets. Federal issues reflected the recent heavy oversubscription of the treasury's $1,000,000,000 short-term offering and belief that the reserve system will continue its steady open market purchases.

Heavy trading in some of the secondary divisions put the sales volume up to $16,132,000, par value, against yesterday's aggregate of $13,103,000. The average for 60 domestic corporate bonds lost two-tenths of a point.

German loans recovered 1 to 4 or more points on reports that the transfer moratorium might be modified somewhat by the Reichbank. The United States government list, although quiet, was up 1-32nd to 6-32nds of a point.

New York, June 13 (AP)—April shipments of pneumatic castings totaled 3,653,943 units, an increase of about 75 percent over March but 1.2 percent under April, 1932, says the Rubber Manufacturers Association, Inc. April production amounted to 3,123,494 casings, an increase of 53.3 percent over March and a decrease of 11.2 percent from a year ago.

Directors of Electric Auto-Lite Co. have taken no action on the quarterly common stock dividend of 30 cents for this quarter, or on the payment for the previous quarter, decision on which had been deferred until the June meeting. A regular quarterly payment of $1.75 on the preferred has been ordered, payable July 1 to holdings of record June 23.

Business Trend Is Still Upward; All Lines Better

The upward trend of general business, which became pronounced in April, has continued throughout May and on into June. Industrial activity is increasing rapidly; both wholesale and retail trade are better; commodity prices are more satisfactory than since last September.

No less important is the fact that the people of this country feel very much better. Although here and there certain communities seem slow to respond to the stimulus which has affected others, men and women the country over are coming to believe that the change has really come and that the back of the depression is broken.

Steel production has been increasing rapidly for ten weeks, with tin plate demand the major factor. Output of this commodity has now reached 80% of capacity. The automotive industry is still buying largely and railroads are beginning to make inquiry for rails. Just now the leading steel consuming products appear to be refrigerators, steel sinks, chairs, picks, spades, axes and steel barrels. Demand for steel for use in public works continues to be disappointing but residential building is on the gain.

Increased industrial activity is reflected in the production of soft coal, which is running about 18% above the levels of a year ago. The output of electric current is rising steadily against the seasonal trend. Greatest demand is still in the Atlantic states, but the central industrial region is using substantially more current than a year ago. Only on the Pacific Coast does consumption continue to lag. Both production and orders for soft wood lumber are running well above those of this time last year. Merchandise car loadings continue to hold up, and are now approximately at last year's levels.

Department store sales, which rose sharply in April, have continued to gain through May, and this was likewise true of automobile sales. Passenger air lines report a marked upturn in the volume of air travel.

The wheat market grew stronger during the month because of unfavorable weather in the Southwest and reduced plantings in the spring wheat states. Cotton was unsteady toward the end of the month, but the number of working spindles in the country's textile mills continued to increase. Both stock and bond prices rose during May, and the volume of security market transactions likewise. Talk of inflation was, of course, in some measure responsible for this, but the consistent advance in general business supplied the real stimulus.

Meanwhile this country, like every other, looks forward to the World Economic conference which started Monday in London. Now that the European war scare seems to have collapsed, and the long drawn-out disarmament conference at Geneva appears to be making progress, the hopes for real accomplishment in London are brighter. Stabilization of currencies and the lowering of trade barriers are the most important topics for discussion there.

ENGADINE

Engadine, Mich.—George A. Shelton, Ralph S. Shelton, Priscilla Shelton and Mrs. J. M. Puffer of Bedford, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Chase were guests at the Hotel Engadine Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Collins and Miss Phyllis Quinn attended the baccalaureate services at the Manistique high school Sunday evening.

Miss Josephine Polivka, accompanied by her mother, spent the week-end with relatives in St. Ignace.

Clarence Boucha and John Lesatz, stationed at Fort Bray, Sault Ste. Marie, spent Sunday with their parents here.

Mrs. Frank Hall, Mrs. Edward Raymond and Mrs. Frank Campbell of Kalamazoo left for their homes on Monday after spending the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Hallet West at their home on Millecoquin Lake.

George Holt of Gould City was a caller in town Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brevard and family spent Saturday visiting with friends in Newberry.

Adam Krause had a very narrow escape from possible serious injury last Saturday while unloading milk at the Freemans Lumber company's cheese factory here. The team of horses he was driving became frieghtened and ran away. One of the wagon wheels passed over the driver's body. The horses then crossed the railroad tracks where one of the wagon wheels was broken off. Leaving the wagon near the tracks the team ran through a field, and into an alley, and turning around they headed for a small lake where they became entangled in the mud, but were finally extricated. Mr. Krause was unhurt except for a few minor bruises.

King George is reported to have lost weight during his recent illness. Another case of the declining British pound?

BRIDGES DROPS PITCHING DUEL

Hildebrand Sets Down Tigers With Just Two Safeties

Detroit, June 13 (AP)—A fine pitching duel between Oral Hildebrand and Tommy Bridges which saw but four men reach third base in the entire game, ended in a 1 to 0 victory for the Cleveland Indians in a series opener with Detroit here.

The winning score came in the fifth inning when Vosmik tripled and scored on Pytlak's single. The game was Hildebrand's third victory over the Tigers in four starts, and today he set the Detroit batters down with two hits, both of them singles.

Bridges yielded seven hits, one a triple by Boss, who was received from the game after wrenching his knee when he slid into third. Morgan finished at first base.

As a result of the Indians victory today Walter Johnson maintained his record as a thousand per cent manager so far. The Indians' first game under his regime was with St. Louis, and they won by the same 1 to 0 score there, but were forced into an extra inning. Neither of the teams today was charged with a misplay. They meet again tomorrow. It was announced today that Friday, an open date for the Tigers, would be utilized to make up a postponed game with the Indians.

Washington Hands Athletics Defeat

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Some prodigious ball pounding by a trio of Senators against a pair of Philadelphia pitchers today gave Washington its second straight victory over the Athletics, 10 to 6, pushing the Senators a game nearer the league leading Yankees.

The famous Mose Grove came in as a third Philadelphia hurler to put on one of his relief acts, limiting the Nationals to one hit in the inning he worked, but by that time the game was lost.

Manush enjoyed a perfect day, with five hits in as many attempts, two of his blows being doubles. Goslin was not far behind with a homer and two doubles in four tries, while Cronin had a double and a single.

Cooke drove in four runs, including the winning tallies. His home run with Rabbit Warstler on base in the seventh inning was the deciding blow.

Professionals Play in Charity Matches at White Plains

BY ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

White Plains, N. Y., June 13 (AP)—Still pursued, as it were by amateur goblins, Captain Walter Hagen and his Ryder Cup forces, already smarting under the setback administered to them by 23-year-old Johnny Goodman at Chicago in the open championship, yielded the spotlight today in a series of charity matches to a 17-year-old high school lad. Willie Turnesa.

The professional team, mustering its full strength of ten homebreds for the first time, won four out of five best-ball foursomes against a picked team of metropolitan amateurs led by Jess W. Sweetser, but Young Turnesa stole the show. He shot the best round of the afternoon, an even par 71 over the 6800-yard Metropolis club course, and paired with the home club champion, Howard Bergman, to beat Horton Smith of Chicago and Ed Dudley, of Wilmington, Del., by 2 and 1.

Young Turnesa, four of whose brothers are professional golfers, shot spectacular golf. He beat the score made by any of the Ryder Cup aces, Gene Sarazen and Densmore Shute of Philadelphia each posting 72, to divide the $300 prize money offered the professionals.

The professionals had comparatively little trouble winning the other four matches, although Sarazen, the British open champion, and Olin Dutra, P. G. A. title holder, never had much working margin in defeating George J. Voight and Eddie Driggs, 2 and 1. The amateurs tossed away their chance to prolong the issue by driving into trouble on the long 15th. Sarazen's 72 carried most of the burden, Dutra shooting an erratic 77, while Voight had a 76 and Driggs a 73.

Froebel high school of Gary has won the Indiana state scholastic track and field championship six straight years and her athletes hold five of the 13 records.

ord-breaking special session of congress.

Three days ago it was abandoned by its friends and conceded to be dead, at least for this session.

The failure to adjourn Saturday night as planned gave it new life.

Conferees of the house and senate got together in a long meeting yesterday and came to a final agreement upon the wording of the measure.

President Roosevelt's approval of the bill was foreshadowed during the final debate when Senator Glass (D-Va.), who has fought unremittingly for the bill for more than two years, told the senate it represented a "complete accord" between the president and the conferees.

The bill provides for insurance of all deposits up to $2,500 beginning January 1, but contains a provision that the president may by proclamation fix an earlier effective date.

A broader system of insurance will go into effect July 1, 1934, for members of the reserve system and non-member state banks, but the latter must become members of the system by July 1, 1936, or drop out of the insurance system.

The bill will permit national banks to operate branches in states which specifically permit their own state institutions to do so.

Great power is conferred on the federal reserve board to regulate credit, by refusing to extend it where it is being used for speculative purposes deemed unwise by the board.

Insurance System

Other banking changes include the divorcement of national banks from their security affiliates; application of a similar principle to private banks; and a prohibition against loans by member banks to their own officers.

The bill also will prevent payment of interest on demand deposits and permit the reserve board to limit the interest on time deposits.

The insurance system will be administered by a corporation headed by the comptroller of the currency and two members appointed by the president.

The corporation will receive $150,000,000 from the treasury; half the reserves, or $175,000,000, from federal reserve banks; and one half of one percent of the deposits under insurance.

In addition, it will have the power to borrow up to twice its capitalization, which it is estimated will give it total resources of about $2,000,000,000.

After July 1, 1934, deposits up to $10,000 will be fully insured; those from $10,000 to $50,000 insured up to 75 percent; and those above $50,000 insured 50 percent. On January 1 deposits up to $2,500 will be insured 100 percent.

Glass told the senate the conferees had agreed to make this insurance plan effective in January instead of immediately as proposed by Vandenberg because it was clear the bill was "endangered" by the senate provision.

WYATT PITCHES ONE HIT GAME

Gullic's Single in 9th Robs Hurler of No-Hit Performance

Chicago, June 13 (AP)—A clean single over second base by Ted Gullic after two were out in the ninth inning today cheated John Whitlow Wyatt, 24-year-old righthander out of a no-hit game, as the Chicago White Sox defeated St. Louis, 6 to 1.

Wyatt, who was obtained from Detroit recently in a straight trade which sent Vic Frasier to the Tigers, had yielded a run in the third, chiefly due to his own wildness. The White Sox, Meanwhile, cracked Hank McDonald, Sam Gray and Rolland Stiles for 14 hits, with Gray the chief sufferer.

The only run off Wyatt was scored on passes to Mervyn Shea and Muddy Ruel, who batted for McDonald, followed by Art Scharein's sacrifice and an infield out.

It was Wyatt's second straight victory since joining the Sox.

MUCH ACTIVITY AT GARTH CAMP

Foresters Digging Wells and Cleaning Up Grounds

A typical army camp, excepting for the fact that the civilian foresters are clad in blue denim overalls, is the scene presented at the state reforestation camp at Garth.

There are 185 young men quartered in the quadrangle of army tents, each of which accommodate eight foresters. Cutting of weeds, clearing out brush and debris, and the digging of two wells occupied the time of the crew yesterday.

Price in Charge

Lieut. A. L. Price, who during the past year has been R. O. T. C. instructor at the University of Chicago, is the camp commandant. Other members of the staff are: Lieut. Leland J. Belding, U. S. N., camp surgeon; Lieut. Earl L. Hart, Lansing, reserve officer; and three enlisted army men. Lieut. Belding returned not many months ago from service in Nicaragua.

Robert Furlong, state conservation supervisor of Escanaba, has supervision over the reforestation work at the camp site. Experienced woodsmen and trained foresters will be assigned to the camp soon. Work of constructing a road in the Sturgeon river country is the first project planned.

Champ Boxer in Camp

Most of the boys are from Grand Rapids and Pontiac. They appeared to enjoy their work yesterday, although some complained about the large mosquitos and cold weather. Baseball, boxing and other recreational activities are planned for the boys after the camp is well organized.

Water Kapinsky of Grand Rapids, former state amateur heavyweight boxing champion, and Stanley Allen, another amateur pugilist, are members of the Garth camp. Other boys are reported to be proficient in baseball, tennis and golf.

Visits Camp

N. P. Thompson, upper peninsula representative of the state department of labor and industry, visited the Garth forestry camp yesterday. Mr. Thompson announced yesterday that he had been designated to receive the applications from unemployed war veterans, who wish to enroll in the civilion conservation corps. Delta county's quota of veterans has been placed at six.

TRENARY NEWS

Shower Held

A shower was given Mrs. Clayton Stevens, formerly Miss Violet Gregg, Thursday evening by Mrs. Philip Viton, at her home southeast of Winters. Many from Trenary attended. The bride received many useful gifts. Cards were played and a delicious lunch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will make their home near Winters.

The storm Thursday evening blew several trees down across the road near Kiva. Traffic was forced to turn back and take the Traunik road. Men were sent to clear away the trees as soon as word reached Trenary. Trenary was without electric lights until Friday.

Steve Slambo, Ben Gregg and Ed. Culver made a business trip to Marquette Friday.

Mrs. Carl Case and sons left Friday morning for California, where they will spend the summer.

Clarence Snyder, who for the past year has assisted Miss Hilda Webber in the postoffice has received a position in a reforestation camp.

Mrs. Carl Markley is visiting relatives near Trenary and Marquette.

Mrs. Hattie Williams visited her sister Mrs. William Williams Wednesday.

Mrs. Norman Hall, who is in St. Mary's hospital at Marquette is reported as much improved and is again allowed visitors.

School Accredited

Supt. V. C. Vaughan received a notice a few days ago that the Mathias Township high school, located at Trenary has again been accredited for two years by the University of Michigan. J. C. Condon of the university visited here on an inspection tour during the last week in May. This is the second time that Trenary has been given a two year's certificate of approval, previously receiving but one year's approval at a time. It speaks well for the rating of the school.

Those New Ideas In Economics

The Industrial Recovery Act; Trusts and Corporations; Emphasizing Cooperation

By J. R. BRACKETT
(Associated Press Business Writer)

New York (AP)—One of the arguments advanced by advocates of the National Industrial Recovery act is that while it seems to foster "monopolistic" practices, it is likely rather to strengthen, or at least maintain, the smaller enterprise.

Opinion is by no means unanimous on this point, but many observers agree that business gianti-ism has not been stopped by the anti-trust laws, the restrictions of which the new bill suspends in part.

The anti-trust laws prohibit any business organization in restraint of trade. They were designed to prevent the formation of large business units which could dominate an industry. The old-time monopolies cut prices, employed secret rebates, and otherwise attempted to eliminate competitors.

Not Eliminated

Such practices were modified but not entirely eliminated by the anti-trust laws. In attempting to preserve the enterprise of the small industrialist from the encroachments of the business giant, the anti-trust laws laid down regulations which affected small enterprises as well as their large competitors.

The small fellow was protected from the more or less direct punitive efforts of the big fellow, but he was not protected from ordinary competition or price wars.

Further, the anti-trust laws did not prevent the formation of business giants. Many corporations today are larger than was the largest trust, statistics show.

The Industrial Recovery bill is directed partly at what its advocates call the inequity of the old laws. While the new bill is not designed to fix prices, it does permit fixing of certain basic costs within an industry, such as wage rates, and it permits publication of costs, together with other statistics that will enable competitors better to determine prices.

It may further allow certain industries to fix minimum costs, or at least to provide that no member of an industry may sell below cost.

Both big and little industrialists in a particular trade association thus are given the same advantages and disadvantages, friends of the bill say.

The argument continues that in exchange for complete business freedom they are given opportunities for cooperation, and may be, in effect, forced to cooperate by federal edict. The new bill proposes that cooperation is at least as important as competition.

Domination Feared

Opponents of this theory fear that the larger units of business within a trade association will dominate all the members, that the little fellow will give up not only his freedom, but, in being forced to subscribe to the business practices of the big fellow, lose his comparatively smaller business power.

Many state that the success of cooperation depends upon the equitable administration of the bill and that such administration will strengthen the lesser units.

AMUSEMENTS

Double feature programs are scheduled for the Delft for the remainder of the week. Tonight and tomorrow night, the theatre offers "Daring Daughters" and "Mussolini Speaks".

The cycle of hotel-laid plots has lent unusual glamor to this season's dramatic triumphs—and among them comes "Daring Daughters," a gripping melodrama with Marian Marsh starred.

"Daring Daughters" is a very pleasing picture that is intensely modern—with all the menace that lies in wait for charming blondes in a pleasure-mad city. With Miss Marsh appears another striking beauty—Joan Marsh—who plays her sister, and though unrelated, the likeness is quite remarkable. Others in a distinguished cast include Kenneth Thomson, Bert Roach and Allen Vincent under the direction of Christy Cabanne.

Never has there been a cast assembled to compare with the personages who appear in "Mussolini Speaks," Columbia Pictures' autobiography of the Italian Prime Minister. Naturally Benito Mussolini plays the lead and by far the largest role in the picture, but surrounding him are such royal figures as King Emanuel and Queen Helena of Italy; Crown Prince Humbert of the House of Savoy; His Holiness, Pope Pius XI; King Boris of Bulgaria; Princess Giovanna of Italy; King Albert and Princess Marie Jose of Belgium; Balbo, Minister of Airways; Dino Grandi, member of Mussolini's Cabinet who has frequently been to America representing the Italian Government.

DON'T LET YOUR RHEUMATISM "GET" YOU

Don't neglect the first symptoms of Rheumatism. The time to cure it is RIGHT ON THE START. The firmer hold it gets on you, the more trouble you are likely to have getting rid of it. Too many people get the idea that "it will pass off," and take a chance of a long and painful illness.

Rheumatism generally comes from slow poisoning of the system. It may be tonsils or teeth or some other source of infection and the cause may or may not cease. But whether it ceases or not you must expel the poison poured into your system from the source of infection, because the mere fact that you have rheumatism or the symptoms of rheumatism is fair evidence that your body has not been able to expel the poison.

It is apparently a warning from nature that the body needs assistance. Go to your druggist and get a box of Rheumax. One box contains two weeks' treatment. Follow the directions. If your case is stubborn it may take two or even three boxes to eliminate the poison. But GET AT IT AT ONCE.
